A pretty nuptial event of yesterday afternoon was the marriage of Miss Eveafternoon was the marriage of Miss Evelyn Dixon, daughter of Samuel Dixon, formerly of McDonald, West Virginia, but now of Virginia, to Dr. Frank Dillard, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Dillard, of Spotsylvania. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock at "Dewberry," one of the oldest and most historic old homes in fianover County, and the wonderful old rooms of the stately house were thrown open everywhere for the wonderful old rooms of the stately house were thrown open everywhere for the guests, and hung with garlands of evergreens and bright red flowers. Mistletoe and holly and many lighted candles decorated the old-fashioned drawing-room for the ceremony, and the bride descended the stairway on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Miss Nell Dixon was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, and Lester Dillard was best man.

To-Morrow's Menu By MARTHA WESTOVER.

As a feast day should always be preceded by a fast for spiritual, physical or economic reasons, it is fitting that well-balanced vegetable menus should be provided for the day before Christmas. In lieu of meat, some of the "proteins" or tissue-building foods suggested are cheese, eggs, nuts and beans. The difference in the cost will give the thrifty house wife an opportunity to provide some additional tid-bit for the Christmas dinner. These meals are for six persons. meals are for six persons.

Silent Companions BY LILLIAN RUSSELL

A little story I heard the other day about a good old clergyman amused me and at the same time emphasized the frequency with ,which people are judged by their silent companions,

The clergyman frequently sent magazines to some of his relatives. They preferred pictures to reading matter, and the minister always bore this in mind in making his contributions. On one occasion he went to his hook store and being in a hurry he book store and, being in a hurry, he asked the clerk to select a number of Morning Headache—I am a girl of sixteen. Nearly every morning I awake with a headache. It generally passes away after I get up and move about for a while. Sometimes it stays, and the whole left side of my face, ear and jaw aches a little. What is the cause of this?

Reply—Two common causes of morning headache are inadequate ventilation, sleeping in a warm room without open windows; and oversleeping. In your case there may be an impacted molar tooth, if not deptal caries; better have an inspection by your dentist.

Clare B.: Yes, the cocon butter is good for developing the bust. It should be massaged gently into the bust daily. The cocon butter should Sick Headache—Will you kindly state whether eyestrain is a cause of sick headaches? An optician claims eyestrain is the cause in nine cases out of ten.

cinal or other remedy which will restore varicose veins in the legs to normal, then we will have found a complete cure for piles, too. But we believe no one dares claim to "cure" varicose veins in the sense of restoring them to their original competent condition. That plenty of sharks do claim to "cure" plies by medicinal means merely proves the truth of Barnum's famous epigram.

The intelligent use of local remedies is a comfort for many a sufferer with piles. The most important indication to be met in an attack of piles"—is to relieve the irritability and spasmodic contraction of the sphincter or pursestring muscle. This muscle is an obstacle in the treatment of all rectal troubles, and the physician may find it advisable to prescribe beliadonna in ointment or suppository for the purpose of relaxing the spasmodic sphincter, thus relleving the pain considerably.

Opiates and astringents are incorporated in pile remedies, and sometimes antiseptics. But the chief thing to do for an attack of piles is take a large dose of salts, to reduce the pressure of blood in the portal veins and indirectly reduce the congestion of the hemorrhoidal vein. Also get off the feet, and if possible elevate the hips. Apply moist heat for its relaxing influence—large, hot, moist compresses frequently changed. If the pile is extruded, it must be replaced before rellef can be expected. If it is apparently filled with clot, the clot must be let out by the doctor's lance.

Rest assured that no remedy short of surgery can possibly give permanent relief in any case of hemorrhoids.

Questions and Answers.
Croup Not Fatal—Mrs. F. E. L. writes that her two-year-old boy has frequent attacks of croup, and she is about frightened to death. She asks for advice about prevention.

Reply—To begin, croup is never fatal, notwithstanding the efforts of fake croup cure manufacturers to frighten parents. The prevention is summed up in three words—cold, fresh air. Croup never visits a child who receives plenty of cold, fresh air while he sleeps. A two-year-old baby or one of any age should not sleep in a warmed room, but in a cool or cold room.

bust daily. The cocoa butter should first be melted. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall send you instructions for developing the bust.

C. L. B.: The amount given in the prescription for reducing the bust may be sufficient, but if it isn't continue eyestrain is the cause in nine cases out of ten.

More correctly it is the other way around—eyestrain causes about one out of ten cases. More frequently auto-toxemia from digestive disturbance is the precipitating factor of the attack. Anyway, why should an optician pretend to know what causes anything? His work is purely mechanical; he is
